PUTTING IT ALL TOGETHER

Metering Systems

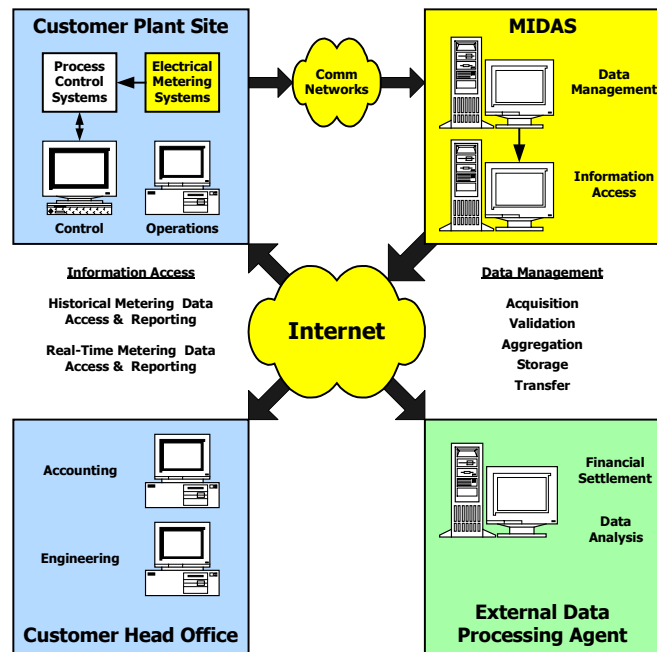

It all starts with the meter! Whether it is a full revenue-certified electrical metering system, an electrical metering transducer, an energy pulse recorder, or a specialized metering control interface scheme, MIDAS can provide the technical expertise and experience required to manage, design, assemble, install, commission, operate and maintain the system.

Data Management

While today's meters are capable of generating an enormous amount of data, none of it is of any real use to you unless you can collect, validate, process and store it in a manner that will make it the trustworthy and available data source you can rely on for use when making on-going energy management business decisions. MIDAS has developed revenue metering grade data management systems and processes designed to ensure that your data is handled with the due care and attention it deserves. Our operational personnel have extensive experience administrating large scale revenue metering data management systems and pride themselves on 'getting it right' every time!

Information Access

Whether you're involved in energy management, procurement or cost accounting, the information derived from metering data is a fundamental input to your business decision-making processes. It is therefore critical that all those so tasked within your organization have access to the information they need to make the best possible decisions. MIDAS presents this information through innovative applications that can be seamlessly delivered throughout your organization over the Internet.

"If you cannot measure it, if you cannot express it in quantitative terms, then your knowledge is of a meager and insignificant kind."
